

Leadership Seminar/Workshop with Dominic Peter Fischer

Leadership - When all is said and done, this is what we are doing as educators. We are preparing the next leaders in our world, be it in medicine, banking, engineering or education. We are developing our young men and women to think (hopefully how to think and not just what to think), to have courage enough to dream and envision, to be confident enough to go against the tide and be strong in one's convictions, and to be ethical, conscience driven, truthful.

Dominic Peter Fischer is offering his Leadership Seminar which he has given to Int'l companies around the world such as Roche, Orange, IBM, Dupont, Mellon Bank, Novartis, Holderbank, Nestle and many more, to International schools.

Dominic draws his inspiration about the leadership subject from working with dynamic and outstanding leaders in the fields of athletics, the arts and the corporate business world. It is with such experience that he is able to find a way to communicate to just about every type of student.

Dominic's thought was why not offer such a seminar to the leaders of tomorrow not just today's leaders. He began last May at Aiglon College when one of the directors of the school called and asked if he could do this for the seniors. It was a Wed. Afternoon, free time, and the course was voluntary. There were not enough chairs as more than 60 students showed up and the discussions could have gone on for several more hours. The atmosphere was buzzing with curiosity, dialogue and a passion to learn. Why?

Because the students know they will be tomorrow's leaders in one capacity or another. Even a Leadership Institute has been proposed as a follow up.

JFK. Lyceum Zuoz and other Int'l schools are planning to set up an initial 3 hr. seminar.

What about you? Interested?
